CAMBER . . .

Camber was first adapted from snow ski design to skateboards by Bob Turner (Turner SummerSki) in the fall of 1974. The first boards utilizing camber were made of a solid fiberglass laminant which has now evolved to a matrix of foam core and fiberglass.

Camber is used for the initiation of turns; for smoothing out and delivering response in long drawn-out g-force type turns. It allows for 4-wheel drift rather than spin-out in critical situations.

Prototype boards have been constructed of carbon graphite fibre and epoxy resins with encouraging signs for future development.

This particular formula has been ridden successfully by Bobby Peirce, Tommy Ryan and fellow SummerSki team-mates in competition against World Champions in a series of races held in San Diego's North County.

"What Do You Think Of Skateboarding?"

Humans, rolling over the ground.

You gotta go faster, man, you gotta go faster.

Joe Lynch/Racer

It's a good thing if used with common sense. A good safe area is important - like this hill up here. Where we have problems is with participants not using minimum equipment - like shoes and a long sleeved shirt.

I think an orthopedic Surgeon (bone doctor) invented the skateboard.

I think it's a new art form.

Talkin to Tracker

DAVID DOMINY — skater for 12 years, now co-manufacturer of Tracker Trucks, made his first skateboard business (Skateboards Hawaii) at age 13.

Interviewed by Diana Dootson

How's Tracker business?

(Chuckle) . . . it's fine.

Where will Tracker go from here?

The sky's the limit.

Why do Tracker Trucks work so well?

They were made specifically for skateboarding with fine mechanical improvements. Then there's the width. It gives you much more traction and security. It makes skateboards the way they always should have been and probably always will.

What are some differences in boards?

There are lots of different boards, obviously. But there are a few basic ones. And the most general categories are slalom and freestyle. Both require different wheels, trucks, and chassis.

What is your preference?

I like freestyle boards but I'll always have a slalom board because I like to slalom. I have a Turner foam camber board set up to do just that.

My freestyle board lets me do anything I want: I can incorporate tricks onto bank and hill riding, whereas a slalom board is restricted to a slalom course or downhill.

What are some differences in wheels?

Big, small, wide, precision, etc. There are so many wheels it baffles my ball bearings.

Which do you prefer?

I like Road Riders and Power Paws. Precision only.

What is your favorite type of skateboarding?

I like bank riding.

What do you get out of racing?

(Laugh) . . . fun.

Any opinions on skateboarding for money as opposed to keeping money out of it?

I'm not in competition for money. I don't care what anyone else does.

What's the best way to improve your skateboarding?

Skate — just stay on wheels.

Do you have any comments for people just getting into skateboarding?

It's easier to ride Tracker Trucks.

VINCE TURNER, Representative of the Turner SummerSki is a hot competitor in the Giant Slalom and Slalom races.

What makes the Turner SummerSki different from other boards?

Construction/design. Our boards are made with an exclusive urethane foam core using the original skateboard camber design which gives "Control" — the main difference.

How do "flex" and "camber" differ?

Camber equals return and punch, flex equals sag.

What differences do you find in racing today as compared with racing years ago?

Equipment . . . it's definitely more advanced — faster. Competition is much stiffer and there are more super riders.

Which type of contest do you prefer — large sponsor-organized, or small rider-organized?

The smaller rider-organized — they're more together, on better surfaces and the courses are happening. There's no jive.
